Reviewing the operating environment in 2025, the global economy was driven by the rapid expansion of artificial intelligence (AI) applications, which spurred strong related demand. Trade momentum across countries generally strengthened. Amid the combined effects of substantial investments in AI and a global environment in which central banks, led by the U.S. Federal Reserve, were poised to lower interest rates, despite the uncertainties surrounding Trump's tariff policies and geopolitical risks, the global economy in 2025 still demonstrated resilience beyond expectations.

Domestically, benefiting from strong global demand for AI applications and semiconductor exports far exceeding expectations, the related industrial supply chain and exports experienced robust growth. The Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) projected an economic growth rate of 8.63% for 2025, reaching a new high in nearly 15 years. However, growth momentum was primarily concentrated in electronics and cybersecurity products, while traditional steel-consuming industries such as transportation and machine tools had yet to recover. In addition, the contraction in domestic housing transactions and the decline in construction project launches adversely affected domestic steel demand and pricing in 2025. Nevertheless, by actively capturing demand from the construction of technology plant facilities and large-scale urban redevelopment projects, and through the joint efforts of all Chun Yuan employees both domestically and overseas, the Company achieved consolidated revenue of NT$24,189 million and consolidated profit before tax of NT$1,865 million in 2025, delivering strong results in both revenue and profitability.

Looking ahead to 2026, the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) has significantly revised the economic growth forecast upward from the original 3.54% to 7.71%, while export growth has surged from 6.32% to 22.22%, indicating that economic momentum is expected to continue. However, we must continue to closely monitor international developments, including geopolitical conflicts in the Middle East, U.S. tariff policies, whether the AI boom will continue to thrive, the policy stance of the new Fed Chair, and whether China's economy will recover.

In terms of steel demand, the World Steel Association forecasts that global steel demand in 2026 is expected to increase slightly by 1.3% to 1.772 billion tons. There are three key favorable factors for the steel market this year. First, China will strengthen steel export management, which is expected to curb the dumping of low-priced steel and help Asian steel prices bottom out. Second, as the United States enters an interest rate-cutting cycle, momentum in infrastructure and manufacturing is set to recover. Finally, steel inventories in Europe have fallen to historically low levels, driving restocking demand, and combined with infrastructure momentum in Southeast Asia, steel demand in 2026 is expected to remain positive.

Outlook for major domestic steel-consuming industries:

In the transportation sector, as Taiwan-U.S. tariff policies become clearer and market concerns dissipate, inventories of imported vehicles across brands are expected to be gradually reduced. Coupled with the continued effect of commodity tax reduction subsidies and expanded promotional efforts, a new wave of vehicle purchases is anticipated. Toyota Motor Corporation of Japan has indicated that it will leverage Taiwan's automotive production capacity to market to other global markets, including re-exporting to Japan. Taiwan is expected to become the "fourth production region" outside Japan's three primary production bases. Taiwan's automotive manufacturing will become more solid under Toyota's global strategy, and steel demand in 2026 is projected to recover.

Letter to the Shareholders

In the machinery sector, driven by sustained growth in demand for semiconductor equipment and AI applications, Taiwan's machinery and equipment output value in 2026 is expected to continue growing, with an annual increase of 4% to 6%.

In the warehousing and logistics sector, there remains stable demand for cold chain logistics warehouses and general logistics storage facilities. With the evolution of domestic consumption patterns and the development of urban commercial districts, there is also a significant increase in demand for logistics equipment expansion.

In the construction sector, the residential property market has been impacted by tightened mortgage lending and credit controls, with overall activity remaining at a relatively low level. Looking ahead, the housing market will face greater uncertainty. However, the commercial property sector is benefiting from growth in high-tech companies, and this momentum is expected to continue into 2026. In addition, with ongoing public infrastructure projects and large-scale private urban redevelopment initiatives, the overall outlook for the construction industry can be viewed with cautious optimism, and the steel structure sector is expected to maintain the strong momentum seen in 2025.

Looking ahead, the Company will sustain growth momentum by adopting a strategy of leveraging existing products and markets to cultivate new products and markets. In response to the accelerated pace of the broader environment, we must expedite the development of new products and markets and keep pace with evolving trends. In particular, the Company's business operations should further penetrate the technology industry, the heavy electrical equipment sector, and profitable product markets, enabling Chun Yuan's diversification to keep pace with the times. Only through continuous renewal and improvement can we proceed steadily, pave a broad path for the future, and sustain operations with distinction. As long as we strictly adhere to the Company's rules and regulations, uphold an attitude of integrity, confidence, diligence, and responsibility, and work together to pursue our goals while striving for innovation and embracing change to expand future opportunities with full commitment, this year will surely be a fruitful one.

Finally, we would like to express our sincere gratitude to all esteemed shareholders for your long-standing support of Chun Yuan. Going forward, we will continue to enhance the Company's value and create maximum returns for shareholders to reciprocate your support, and we sincerely look forward to your continued support and guidance.

2. The board of directors' diversity and independence:

(1) The board of directors' diversity

[Diversity Policy]

Pursuant to Article 20 of the Company's Corporate Governance Best Practice Principles regarding the competencies required of the Board of Directors as a whole, the composition of the Board of Directors shall be determined based on comprehensive considerations. In addition to the fact that the number of directors concurrently serving as managers of the Company should not exceed one-third of the total number of board seats, appropriate diversity policies shall be formulated in light of the Company's operating model and future business development needs, including but not limited to the following two major aspects:

- ◎ Basic conditions and values: Diversity in gender, age, nationality, and cultural background shall be considered.
- ◎ Professional knowledge and skills: Diverse professional backgrounds, expertise, and industry experience shall be considered to meet the Company's talent requirements.

Corporate Governance Report

The nomination and election of Board members is based on the company's Articles of Incorporation, by adopting a candidate nomination system. According to the business mode and development plans of the Company, the Board members should have diversified skills related to the steel industry, management, accounting, and finance, to ensure the diversity and independence of directors.

Members of the Board of Directors possess the knowledge, skills, and competencies necessary to perform their duties. To achieve the objectives of corporate governance, the Board of Directors shall possess the following capabilities:

- ◎ Operational judgment capability.
- ◎ Accounting and financial analysis capability.
- ◎ Business management capability.
- ◎ Crisis management capability.
- ◎ Industry knowledge.
- ◎ International market perspective.
- ◎ Leadership capability.
- ◎ Decision-making capability.

[Diversity Objectives and Implementation Status]

The Company places importance on the composition of the Board of Directors in terms of expertise and gender. Among them, the target proportion for expertise in law, finance, and accounting is at least one-eleventh each; the target proportion for industry knowledge expertise is at least one-half; and the target proportion of female directors is at least one-eleventh.

The Board of Directors has the necessary professional knowledge, skills and literacy to perform its duties. With diversified background and practical experience, it can continue to strengthen the Company's governance and operational synergies.

Due to the fact that experts and professionals with backgrounds and knowledge in the steel industry are predominantly male, the pool of female director candidates is relatively limited. At the time of the comprehensive re-election of directors at the annual general shareholders' meeting on June 19, 2025, the Company added one female director seat and currently has two female directors. The Company will adopt a gradual approach to increasing the proportion of female directors and will progressively raise the proportion to one-third in the future.

- ◎ Implementation status of the Board of Directors diversity policy: Please refer to the table on page 24.

(2) The board of directors' independence

The Company's board comprises 11 directors, including 3 independent directors. None of the directors fall under the conditions specified in Paragraphs 3 and 4, Article 26-3 of the Securities and Exchange Act. For information on spousal or second-degree kinship relationships among board members, please refer to "(I) Information of Directors and Supervisors." In conclusion, the Board of Directors maintains a high level of independence.

Although the emission is not as controlled as the standard of the Ministry of Environment, the climate change still has the potential risk to the Company, such as the short delay of heavy rain and the warming caused by the climate change, which lead to the flooding and sintering of the plant. Measures taken include: in the lower-lying Xizhi Plant area, a water level warning system is used to activate the pumping station, to reduce the flooding probability of the plant; For high temperatures during summer, some plants use ventilation fans to enhance air circulation, and the roofs of the Longtan/Tainan/ Kaohsiung/ Plants were installed or leased to energy companies for the installation of solar panels. It not only reduces the temperature of the facility but also alleviates physical discomfort among on-site personnel and enforces policies that conserve energy and reduce carbon emissions. None.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

|  | Based on the findings of the self-assessment, the Company states the following with regard to its internal control system during the year 2025: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>I. The Company is aware that the Board of Directors and management are responsible for establishing, implementing, and maintaining an adequate internal control system. The Company has already established this system. Its goal is to provide reasonable assurance over the effectiveness and efficiency of our operations (including profitability, performance and safeguarding of assets), reliability, timeliness, transparency of reporting, and compliance with applicable rulings, laws and regulations.</li> <li>II. An internal control system has inherent limitations. No matter how perfectly designed, an effective internal control system can provide only reasonable assurance of accomplishing its stated objectives. Moreover, the effectiveness of an internal control system may be subject to changes due to extenuating circumstances beyond control. Nevertheless, the Company's internal control system contains self-monitoring mechanisms, and the Company takes immediate remedial actions in response to any identified deficiencies.</li> <li>III. The Company evaluates the design and operating effectiveness of its internal control system based on the criteria provided in the "Regulations Governing the Establishment of Internal Control Systems by Public Companies" (the "Regulations" hereafter). The criteria for internal control adopted by the Regulations identify five key components of internal control according to the process of managerial control: (1) control environment, (2) risk assessment, (3) control activities, (4) information and communication, and (5) monitoring activities. Each component includes several items. For the said items, please refer to the Regulations.</li> <li>IV. The Company has evaluated the design and operating effectiveness of its internal control system according to the aforesaid Regulations.</li> <li>V. Based on the findings of such evaluation, the Company believes that, on December 31, 2025, it has maintained, in all material respects, an effective internal control system (that includes the supervision and management of our subsidiaries), to provide reasonable assurance over our operational effectiveness and efficiency, reliability, timeliness, transparency of reporting, and compliance with applicable rulings, laws and regulations.</li> <li>VI. This statement is an integral part of the Company's Annual Report and prospectus, and will be made public. Any falsehood, concealment, or other illegality in the content made public will entail legal liability under Articles 20, 32, 171, and 174 of the Securities and Exchange Act.</li> <li>VII. This Statement was passed by the Board of Directors in their meeting held on March 5, 2026, with none of the eleven attending directors (proxies included) expressing dissenting opinions, and the remainder all affirming the content of this Statement.</li> </ol> |

(II) Overview of the industry

1. Review of the steel industry

Reviewing 2025, despite high international political and economic uncertainties, China's overcapacity in steel leading to external dumping, and the United States imposing tariffs of up to 50% on steel and aluminum under Section 232, the overall steel market gradually recovered driven by expectations of market improvement.

According to statistics from the World Steel Association (WSA), global crude steel production in 2025 totaled 1.8494 billion tons, representing a decrease of 2.0% compared to the previous year. From a regional and total production perspective, Asia decreased by 2.5%, with China, Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan declining by 4.4%, 3.9%, 2.7%, and 10.9%, respectively, while Vietnam and India increased by 12.3% and 10.4%, respectively. In other regions, the European Union and the Commonwealth of Independent States decreased by 2.5% and 4.1%, respectively, while North America increased by 1.4%.

Regarding coking coal, the market in 2025 showed a trend of declining first and then rising. In Q1, the market continued the sluggish sentiment from the end of 2024, reaching the lowest price of the year at USD 175.00 per ton, with a quarterly decline of as much as 12.6%, reflecting that global manufacturing demand had not yet fully recovered at that time. Entering Q2, market sentiment began to shift, with prices reversing from decline to growth and rising quarter by quarter. By Q3, prices had rebounded to USD 187.46 per ton, narrowing the gap with the same period of the previous year. In Q4, the market experienced a strong rebound, with a quarterly increase of 13.1%, ultimately closing at USD 211.95 per ton, resulting in an annual growth of 5.9%.

Overview of Business Operations

In 2025, the steel industry sought balance amid uncertainties. Although most steel product prices showed a slight downward trend within a narrow range during the first three quarters due to insufficient momentum in global manufacturing, the rebound in general-grade material prices toward the end of the year laid the foundation for demand recovery in the following year. Taiwan's steel industry continued to face numerous challenges in 2025, and the recovery of market demand will require time. It is necessary to actively adjust strategies to address price fluctuations and market demand uncertainties.

Overview of Business Operations

In terms of imports and exports, Taiwan recorded a trade surplus of NT$4,854.2 billion in 2025, an increase of NT$2,267.6 billion compared to the previous year (trade surplus of NT$2,586.6 billion). Among these, export value in 2025 reached NT$19,910.4 billion, representing an increase of 30.68% compared to 2024, while imports amounted to NT$15,056.2 billion, reflecting a year-on-year increase of 19.03%. Both exports and imports recorded positive growth compared to 2024, mainly driven by emerging opportunities fueled by high-performance computing and AI (artificial intelligence), as well as surging demand for related electronic components and cybersecurity products.

2. Links between the industry upstream, midstream, and downstream

Upstream:

The upstream raw materials of the steel industry are steel billets and stainless steel billets, both needing to be manufactured through steelmaking procedures. Steelmaking methods can be divided into blast furnace steelmaking and electric arc furnace steelmaking. The primary raw materials for blast furnace steelmaking are iron ore and coking coal (also known as metallurgical coal), with China Steel Corporation (CSC) as a representative producer; the primary raw material for electric arc furnace steelmaking is scrap steel. Due to Taiwan's insufficient self-sufficiency in raw materials and energy required for steelmaking, scrap steel, crude steel, and billets largely rely on imports, which relatively constrains the development of domestic midstream and downstream industry players.

Midstream:

Midstream products in the steel industry include carbon steel products such as hot- and cold-rolled steel coils, rebar, wires and bar rods. In the stainless steel category, there are cold- and hot-rolled stainless steel coils, stainless steel rods and wires and steel profiles, as well as downstream processes like cutting, processing, and pipe manufacturing.

Downstream:

The steel industry is considered the foundation of industry, with a wide range of downstream applications. These include various metal products, molds, machinery and equipment, transportation tools, screws, nuts, steel wires, cables, and the various steel materials required for industrial facilities and construction projects, such as stainless steel pipe fittings, micro connectors, construction hardware, lock products, and more.

3. Competition

The relevant market of Taiwan's steel industry is a fully competitive market. Most steel types can be manufactured and produced by domestic steel mills, while other special steel can be imported by applying for approval and other methods. Various operators are unable to significantly differentiate themselves in terms of material acquisition. From the perspective of pricing and costs, suppliers have long held control over pricing, while downstream customers have good access to information about raw material prices. This puts pressure on intermediate vendors, compressing their profit margins from both ends, leaving them with almost no profitability and making their overall operating conditions quite challenging. Furthermore, Taiwan's domestic economy is small-scale, resembling a "shallow dish" market that is highly susceptible to fluctuations in the international market. This is especially true for the steel industry, which currently faces oversupply. Price-cutting competition is prevalent, making the market extremely competitive.

4. Future development trends

Looking ahead to 2026, investment related to artificial intelligence has become a core driver of global economic growth, not only enhancing manufacturing productivity but also stimulating cross-border trade in services. However, amid rising global trade protectionism and the impact of geopolitical conflicts, whether AI investment can deliver the expected gains in productivity remains a key challenge for the economic outlook. The IMF forecasts that global economic growth in 2026 will be 3.3%, with the United States, the Euro area, and China expected to grow by 2.4%, 1.3%, and 4.5%, respectively.

| Country | Global | U.S. | China | Eurozone | Japan |
|---------|--------|------|-------|----------|-------|
| IMF     | 3.3%   | 2.4% | 4.5%  | 1.3%     | 0.7%  |

In terms of Taiwan's overall economy, the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) has significantly revised this year's economic growth rate upward to 7.71%, with GDP per capita expected to surpass the USD 44,000 threshold. Growth momentum is driven not only by the continued strength of AI and high-performance computing demand, which has propelled exports to reach record highs, but also by robust growth in the domestic consumption market.

For the steel industry, while emerging markets (such as India and ASEAN countries) are showing strong infrastructure momentum, the economic outlook in Europe, the United States, and China remains relatively conservative. The pace of recovery in downstream steel demand is limited, and slight declines in iron ore prices, along with renewed risks from U.S. tariff policies, are exerting pressure on the industry's recovery.

In Taiwan's steel industry, although global political and economic conditions remain uncertain, domestic demand is supported by TSMC's capacity expansion and major public infrastructure projects. In addition, China's implementation of a new round of steel export controls since the beginning of the year is expected to improve the global supply-demand balance and pricing conditions in the steel market. Furthermore, progress in Taiwan-U.S. tariff negotiations will help reduce tariff burdens on downstream products exported to the United States, thereby supporting a recovery in exports and downstream demand.

In the construction sector, the Taiwan Institute of Economic Research (TIER) business climate monitor indicates a renewed downward trend in 2026, declining from 102.46 points in December 2025 to 99.92 points in January 2026. Looking ahead, the impact of the previous disruption in earthwork supply is expected to ease as the National Land Management Agency continues to introduce supporting measures, allowing delays in the commencement of certain public and private projects to be alleviated. In addition, major transportation infrastructure projects across various cities and counties have entered intensive construction phases, and the continued momentum of AI-related opportunities will enable domestic and international high-tech companies to steadily advance their plant construction plans, continuously releasing related plant construction, electromechanical, and piping projects. Therefore, the outlook for the construction industry over the next six months is expected to shift toward growth.

(III) Overview of technologies and research and development work

By implementing the concepts of “seeking innovation and change,” “expanding the future,” “collective efforts,” and “pursuing goals,” the Company accelerates corporate growth and sustainable operations. In addition to actively contacting and collaborating with well-known domestic and foreign research institutions and enterprises, it also integrates related resources within the Company. The R&D Technology Department assists R&D units under each division for the extension or development of products, for the series promotions of equipment and technologies, upgrading, and reengineering of the main equipment of the plants, and automation/labor-saving improvements of production equipment to enhance competitiveness.

The Company's R&D innovation in the field of technology is mainly implemented through the promotion of "R&D projects" by business units to actively enhance innovation strength, maintain the development momentum of new technologies, and apply for patents for the results of technological development as the Company's intellectual property (as of the end of 2025, there were a total of 10 patents). Among them, the technical areas of patent application mainly include storage racking, motor electromagnetic steel sheet design, steel structure bridges and building construction methods. In addition, business, technical information, and trade secrets are protected against leakage in accordance with employee information security and employment contract provisions.

In 2025, the introduction of new technologies and equipment, as well as improvements to existing production equipment, technologies, and processes, were all aimed at automation and labor-saving, enhancing processing efficiency and effectiveness, and thereby increasing added value. Successful examples of improvements are as follows:

1. Steel Business Department, Xizhi Plant: Implementation of equipment networking projects and machine scheduling optimization initiatives, along with the continued promotion of factory automation and labor-saving improvements to provide a high-quality working environment.
2. Direct Sales Business Division, Kaohsiung Plant: Development of new shearing machine processing modes, digitalization of electromechanical maintenance management, smart application development for steel coil logistics shipment APP, digital application and upgrade improvements, and promotion of labor-saving measures across factory production operations.

2025 and up to the publication date of the annual report, the Company's R&D expenses:

2025      January to December : NT$30.82 million

2026      January to March      : NT$10.93 million

(IV) Long- and short-term business development plans

1. Short-term objectives

No matter how the economy fluctuates, the company will continue to monitor market and customer dynamics in order to remain flexible and responsive in a constantly changing business environment. The Company will focus on strengthening "customer management," "accounts management," and "inventory control." The goal is to maintain existing customers, acquire new ones, increase customer numbers and market share, and reduce excessive industry concentration. At the same time, the company will prudently manage materials, optimize invoicing, and shorten inventory turnover days.

In Taiwan, each business division will continue to review the capabilities of various equipment and implement replacement and upgrades based on actual needs to fulfill its commitment to customer quality assurance. For example, in 2025, the Construction Division approved investments in box column (BOX) plate bending equipment, automated laser cutting equipment, H-beam chamfering machines, and CNC plasma cutting machines at the steel structure plant; the Steel Plate Division approved two trucks; the Direct Sales Division approved one truck; and the Automated Warehousing Division approved a new floor panel forming production line for heavy-duty mezzanine racks. These investments will continue to build competitive advantages over peers and achieve operational objectives of revenue and profit growth. In China, the reinvestment division has fully integrated the sales networks in coastal regions, including South China, East China, and North China, to provide local customers with more direct and convenient services.

2. Long-term objectives

Chun Yuan Steel is one of the largest steel cutting and processing and distribution companies in Taiwan. Its processing mainly cover shearing, cutting, punching, rolling, welding, folding and assembling. The steel products include steel sheets, hot-rolled and cold-rolled steel, rolled, plated, electrical steel sheets, special steel strip/rod, and copper and aluminum alloys and other sheets. Services are provided to all industries, but mainly to the transportation industry, 3C and appliance industry, machinery industry, hardware furniture industry and steel structure engineering. The Company plays a key role in the steel industry chain. Facing the volatility of the steel industry, the concept of “talent cultivation” is implemented. Every Chun Yuan employee always upholds an attitude of “sincerity, confidence, diligence, and responsibility,” and a working method of “seeking innovation and change, expanding the future, collective efforts, and pursuing goals,” to be cautious but expend their utmost effort, to fully implement the annual key tasks. Long-term business philosophy is “developing related industries around metals,” to continuously build competitive advantages over peers, and to pursue the corporate mission of “respecting, serving, and satisfying clients, while improving the quality of employees’ lives and maximizing shareholders’ equity.” The Company will realize its vision of becoming the “professional provider of metal material solutions.”

II. Analysis of the market and the production and marketing situation

(I) Market analysis

1. Major industries the Company sells products to

Among the domestic industries demanding steel, for the automotive industry, domestic automotive sales volume in 2025 was 414,000 units, an declined of 9.5% from 457,000 units in 2024. Among these, domestic vehicles declined by 10.5%, with market share falling to 51.3%, while imported vehicle sales decreased by 8.4%, with market share rising to 48.7%. Looking ahead to 2026, as Trump’s tariff policies become clearer and coupled with the reduction in commodity tax on new vehicle purchases, consumer demand in the automotive market is expected to be supported. The market anticipates that the total size of the automotive market may remain at a level similar to 2025, or even recover to the previous level of 440,000 units.

In the machinery sector, Taiwan’s total annual exports reached USD 31.859 billion, representing an increase of 9.1% compared to the previous year. Although in 2025 the machinery industry was affected by negative factors such as U.S. economic conditions, geopolitical conflicts, significant depreciation of JPY and KRW, and dumping of low-priced products from China, strong end-market demand driven by AI and high-performance computing supported exports of electronic equipment-related machinery products. In the machine tool sector, exports in 2025 amounted to USD 2.004 billion, representing a decline of 9.6% compared to 2024, indicating that the market continued to be affected by insufficient demand momentum, while the relatively strong NT$ against JPY continued to impact export competitiveness in the industry. Looking ahead to 2026, machinery exports in January have recorded positive growth for 12 consecutive months, indicating that the overall industry has stabilized and is recovering. The machine tool industry is expected to benefit from demand driven by semiconductor capacity expansion and energy transition, and its output value and exports are viewed with cautious optimism.

In the construction sector, 260,000 property ownership transfers were recorded in 2025, representing a decline of 25.5% compared to 2024 and marking a nine-year low. Looking ahead to 2026, cumulative property ownership transfers from January to February totaled 10,480 units, representing a decrease of 32.8% compared to the same period of the previous year, indicating that the housing market continues to be affected by domestic mortgage policies and credit controls, with transaction activity cooling. In terms of domestic investment, the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) expects exports, consumption, and private investment to all show growth in 2026. In addition, the "Business Climate Survey" released by the Taiwan Institute of Economic Research (TIER) in February indicates that, due to the National Land Administration's formal implementation of the new system for the disposal and transportation of surplus construction soil, some public and private projects have been unable to commence as scheduled or have been suspended. Once supporting measures are introduced, project delays are expected to be alleviated. Furthermore, as major transportation infrastructure projects across various cities and counties enter intensive construction phases and AI-driven opportunities continue to advance plant construction plans of technology companies, growth is expected to continue over the next six months.

Looking ahead to 2026, uncertainties in U.S. economic and trade policies and geopolitical tensions mean that the global economy continues to face numerous risks. However, the ongoing surge in generative AI is expected to support end-market demand, and global trade is projected to grow steadily. The IMF's latest forecast in January places global economic growth at 3.3%, unchanged from the previous year. Taiwan has benefited from the rapid expansion of the AI industry, with the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) revising last year's economic growth upward to 8.68% in February, and forecasting continued growth in private consumption, exports, and investment in 2026. Even under the influence of a high base effect, the economic growth rate is still expected to reach 7.71%. According to the "Current Economic Situation" report issued by the National Development Council in February, the potential risks of the global economy require special attention to:

(1) Geopolitical Conflict:

The Middle East conflict between the United States and Iran and the ongoing Russia-Ukraine war persist, affecting oil supply chains and commodity prices, which may lead to renewed inflationary pressures.

(2) Weakness of China's economy:

China's strong export competitiveness has intensified global trade frictions, prompting countries to adopt anti-dumping and countervailing measures, which have slowed the growth of China's exports. In addition, weak domestic consumer confidence and a continued downturn in the real estate market will directly impact China's consumer market, raising concerns over economic and financial risks and potentially constraining economic growth.

(3) Uncertainty of U.S. economic and trading policies:

U.S. tariff policies face legal validity concerns, and there remains high uncertainty regarding their scope of application and intensity. This will affect market trends and corporate strategies. If trade barriers increase, it may intensify pressure on supply chain adjustments, weaken business and consumer confidence, and constrain global economic growth momentum.

(4) Uncertainty in monetary policies:

Although inflation pressures in major economies have moderated, core inflation remains persistent. This, coupled with continued global tensions, limits the flexibility of central banks' monetary policies. With global interest rates still relatively high, the sustainability of debt in countries with high sovereign debt is at risk, potentially exacerbating volatility in the financial markets.

(5) Risk of an AI bubble bursting:

AI end-use applications are not yet fully mature; however, substantial capital has already flowed into related technology industries, driving stock prices to surge beyond fundamentals. If corporate valuations cannot be effectively translated into actual productivity and profitability, it may trigger significant volatility in financial markets.

2. Future demand-supply and growth of the market

(1) Steel sheets:

Major steel-consuming industries include machinery, shipbuilding, and steel structure industries. Among these, in the construction sector, according to the business climate survey released by the Taiwan Institute of Economic Research (TIER) in February, housing market demand has cooled due to mortgage policies and credit controls. However, semiconductor companies' capacity expansion will generate demand for related plant construction, electromechanical, and piping projects. Therefore, the outlook for the next six months is expected to be positive.

(2) Hot-rolled coils:

Hot-rolled steel coils serve as the substrate for cold-rolled steel coils and hot-dip galvanized steel coils. Cold-rolled steel coils, in turn, are the materials for galvanized steel sheets such as electrical galvanized steel and electrical steel sheets. These steel products are widely used in industries such as transportation, machinery, hardware parts, piping, and construction. With versatile applications and strong global demand, they play a crucial role in various sectors. Looking ahead to 2026, benefiting from the reduction in commodity tax on new vehicle purchases, domestic automobile sales are expected to be supported, and demand for hot-rolled steel coils is viewed with cautious optimism. In the machinery sector, driven by a surge in demand for semiconductor equipment and continued capacity expansion by technology companies, the overall industry outlook is expected to maintain its growth momentum.

(3) Cold-rolled coils and clad steel:

Domestic cold-rolled coils are self-sufficient, supplying the base material of plated steel sheets, and they satisfy the demands of appliances, transportation, optoelectronics, construction, and hardware. As the production of domestic computers, communication and consumer electronics and appliances has moved abroad, demand is not strong. The main demand will be concentrated in the emerging markets like China and Southeast Asia. However, it is still facing the pressure of competition from China's low-priced steel and tariff pressures from Taiwan's lack of foreign trade agreements.

(4) Electrical steel sheets:

The core material for various types of motors, transformers, generators and other electric energy conversion equipment. The main downstream industries are transformers/ballasts, fans and motors. Due to the relocation of industries such as ceiling fans, EI laminations, and motors to China and Southeast Asia, domestic demand has contracted significantly. In addition, the rise of Chinese steel mills, with steadily improving quality and a low-price advantage, has enabled them to compete for market share in both local and Southeast Asian markets. Meanwhile, the stamping and assembly capabilities of related midstream and downstream manufacturers have become increasingly mature, which is unfavorable to Taiwan's export order acquisition.

(5) Non-iron metals:

Aluminum alloy plates are lightweight and have excellent heat dissipation, and are widely used in PC/NB casings, keyboards, mobile phone components, heat sinks, and TFT-LCD backlight panels. The domestic labor market remains stable, and rising wages have also supported consumer demand. In addition, the rapid development of AI end-use products is expected to drive a replacement cycle for PCs and notebooks. Meanwhile, the automotive market, in response to lightweight design requirements, is gradually incorporating aluminum alloy plates; however, due to cost considerations, their application is currently more prevalent in high-end vehicles, while domestically produced vehicles remain primarily price-competitive, making it difficult for demand to grow significantly. Overall, expanding domestic sales of this product remains challenging.

Copper products are mainly brass sheets, red copper sheets, and phosphor bronze sheets, which are widely used in computers, communication and consumer electronics and hardware terminals and connectors. The demand is stable and is deeply affected by exchange rate and LME futures fluctuations. In the long term, growth in China's consumption, rising demand in the Indian market, the development of consumer and automotive electronics, and the global expansion of electric vehicles are all expected to drive continued growth in demand for copper products.

3. Positive and negative factors for future development, and the Company's response to such factors

Looking at the domestic and international steel markets, the favorable and unfavorable factors for the Company's future market development are as follows:

➤ Positive factors

- (1) As the global economy recovers steadily, end-market demand is expected to improve. Coupled with sustained strong demand for emerging technologies such as AI and the gradual recovery of traditional industries, this is expected to boost Taiwan's export and production momentum. In addition, private investment is expected to increase capital expenditures due to semiconductor capacity expansion and airline fleet expansion. Together with a stable labor market and domestic consumption, as well as easing inflation expectations, Taiwan's economy is expected to maintain stable growth. Major domestic and international institutions generally forecast that Taiwan's economic growth in 2026 will exceed 3.5%, while the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) projects that Taiwan's economic growth rate could reach 7.71%. In summary, a recovery in downstream steel demand is expected, and the overall outlook for the steel industry can be viewed with cautious optimism.
- (2) In recent years, China's excess steel production capacity and the spillover of low-priced exports have impacted the global steel market. However, with the implementation of production reduction plans in 2025, if such reductions continue, the global steel market may move beyond the shadow of low-priced dumping and achieve structural supply-demand balance along with a recovery in prices.
- (3) At the end of 2025, China Steel Corporation (CSC) filed anti-dumping applications against imported hot-rolled steel from China and imported electrical steel from China and South Korea to maintain fair trade competition. If approved, these measures will help protect Taiwan's steel industry supply chain, reduce the impact of low-priced imported steel on the domestic market, and stabilize domestic steel prices.
- (4) The Company sells to various industries, serves a wide range of clients, with diversified and quality offerings, and the production and processing technologies are deeply trusted by clients. The Company is able to instantly and completely grasp the market pulse and clients' needs. All divisions fully cooperate and support each other, offering one-stop procurement for clients, to maximize the value of the channels.

➤ Unfavorable factors

- (1) The escalating Middle East conflict between the United States and Iran has led to rising oil prices and supply chain disruptions, which will directly impact consumer prices and corporate operating costs. If oil prices continue to rise, it may further increase the risk of stagflation and trigger a global economic downturn.
- (2) If inflation remains elevated, the Federal Reserve may slow the pace of interest rate cuts, increasing global economic uncertainty and financial market volatility, thereby restraining corporate investment and expansion plans and adversely affecting overall economic development.
- (3) According to the manpower demand survey for Q3 2025 released by the Ministry of Labor in January 2026, the construction engineering industry recorded as many as 17,659 job vacancies in the third quarter, with a vacancy rate of 3.4%, indicating that it is an industry with a relatively high vacancy rate and longer external recruitment periods. This indicates that human resource demand continues to put pressure on labor scheduling, costs, and project timelines in the construction industry.

➤ Responses

- (1) Leverage the long-term collaborative relationships with upstream steel mills, and in response to exchange rate trends, expand the acquisition of niche sources, to reduce material costs and serve long-term quality clients, to ensure revenue and profit.
- (2) The Company precisely understands the needs of clients, handles materials prudently, undertakes proper procurement, sales and inventory management, operates with the most appropriate inventory, and effectively reduces the demand for working capital.
- (3) Various cost-rationalization and cost-saving programs are implemented to strengthen competitiveness.
- (4) The Company maintains close integration with its overseas subsidiaries and is actively expanding its export customer base in Southeast Asia. These efforts aim to reduce over-reliance on specific industries—such as transportation—and markets like China, thereby mitigating the risks associated with operational volatility.
- (5) The Company is expanding new industries and new clients, and is making every effort to develop customized products, to meet clients' demands for materials.
- (6) The Company develops new products and new technologies, introduces new manufacturing processes and new equipment, and ensures that production and processing technologies and product quality continue to lead the industry.

2. Description of other effects (e.g., product quality, pollution prevention, cost reduction): None.

V. Reinvestment policy for the most recent fiscal year, the main reasons for the profits/losses generated thereby, the plan for improving re-investment profitability, and investment plans for the coming year:

The reinvestment policy is mainly centered on a vision of “professional provider of metal material solutions,” seeking to improve investment profit to increase the shareholders’ equity.

Reviewing 2025, U.S. tariff policies were introduced in April, prompting major countries to begin diversifying their reliance on the U.S. market. Coupled with escalating geopolitical conflicts, these developments have continued to pose significant threats to the fragile recovery of the global economy. Focusing on China, AI has driven intelligent transformation and become a new engine of economic growth; however, the country has yet to shake off the overhang of the real estate bubble and local government debt. Affected by China-U.S. trade tensions, the government has introduced multiple stimulus measures to restore weak market confidence. Quarterly GDP growth rates were 5.4%, 5.2%, 4.8%, and 4.5%, respectively, with full-year GDP growth maintained at 5.0%, meeting the official target. The operating performance of various investees indicates that, although tariff impacts prompted customers to build precautionary inventories, the overall imbalance in steel market supply and demand remained unfavorable to market operations. Nevertheless, effective risk management enabled the achievement of reasonable profits.

Looking ahead to 2026, geopolitical risks continue to intensify, with conflicts in Russia-Ukraine, Gaza, and among the United States, Israel, and Iran all affecting global energy security. In addition, the Trump administration continues to impose tariffs under various pretexts, resulting in heightened global uncertainty. China's official economic growth target is set at "4.5%–5.0%", while the IMF estimates growth at 4.5%, mainly driven by ongoing economic stimulus policies, easing China-U.S. trade tensions, and the expansion of exports supported by AI-driven "new quality productive forces." However, the real estate bubble has weakened domestic consumer confidence, and intensified price competition in industries, along with trade frictions arising from accusations of subsidy policies by various countries, pose significant challenges to China's economic growth. In response to a challenging operating environment, the Company will adopt a prudent and cautious approach to mitigate the impact of political and economic uncertainties, continue to monitor market trends and opportunities, provide necessary support, and ensure that its investee companies maintain profitability.

VI. Risk analysis and assessment

- (I) The effect upon the Company's profits and losses of interest and exchange rate fluctuations and changes in the inflation rate, and response measures to be taken in the future:

1. Interest rate risks:

Net interest expense in 2024 amounted to NT$100,915 thousand, accounting for 0.42% of net revenue and 8.39% of operating income; in 2025, net interest expense amounted to NT$110,653 thousand, accounting for 0.46% of net revenue and 6.39% of operating income. The increase in interest expense in 2025 compared to the previous year was primarily due to an increase in borrowing amounts.

In 2025, the Central Bank of Taiwan maintained its policy interest rates unchanged, primarily based on a comprehensive assessment of domestic and international economic and financial conditions. Considering a moderate inflation outlook for 2026 and expectations of stable domestic economic growth in 2026, the Board of Directors of the Central Bank unanimously agreed to keep policy rates unchanged, which will help support the overall stability of the economy and financial system. Looking ahead to 2026, global economic growth continues to face numerous challenges, including global inflation, new tariff policies under U.S. President Trump, geopolitical risks, and rising oil prices resulting from conflicts in the Middle East, all of which are key variables affecting the global economy this year. However, advance inventory buildup and investment and export momentum driven by the AI boom remain the primary drivers of growth. Economic growth in 2026 is still expected to exceed expectations, although the actual outcome will depend on subsequent data. Interest rate adjustments will also be assessed based on international interest rate trends and inflation conditions.

Looking to the future, the Company anticipates a potential increase in financing needs due to rising working capital and capital expenditure requirements. This could lead to a higher interest burden. Nonetheless, the Company has long maintained strong relationships with its banking partners and continues to expand its short- and medium-term credit lines while securing favorable loan terms. As a result, the Company retains sufficient flexibility in managing interest rate risk and does not currently face any significant exposure in this regard. The Company will continue to uphold its principles of prudence and sound financial management. It will carefully evaluate the cost of funds, potential returns, and associated risks to choose the most advantageous financing sources and capital deployment strategies. At the same time, it will stay informed on market interest rate trends and implement timely countermeasures to mitigate any adverse impact of interest rate fluctuations on profitability, all with the aim of maximizing shareholder value.

2. Exchange rate risks:

Net foreign exchange loss in 2024 amounted to NT$906 thousand, accounting for 0.004% of net revenue and 0.08% of operating income; in 2025, net foreign exchange loss amounted to NT$4,615 thousand, accounting for 0.019% of net revenue and 0.27% of operating income, primarily due to the appreciation of USD in 2025 affecting USD-denominated liabilities. Looking back on 2025, in order to stimulate domestic employment through accommodative policies, the U.S. Federal Reserve implemented three rate cuts during the year. Coupled with the impact of reciprocal tariff policies, irrational market expectations led to a sharp appreciation of NT$. The Central Bank of Taiwan took multiple measures to stabilize the exchange rate, allowing the New Taiwan dollar to gradually return to stability. In the second half of the year, despite repeated record highs in Taiwan's stock market, continued net selling of Taiwanese equities by foreign investors and capital outflows resulted in a continued depreciation trend of NT$. Looking ahead to 2026, NT$ against USD will be significantly influenced by the aftereffects of U.S. monetary policy and tariff policies. As the U.S.-Iran conflict intensifies and international oil prices surge, U.S. President Trump has once again pressured the Federal Reserve to immediately cut interest rates. However, investor views diverge from Trump's stance. Since the outbreak of conflict in the Middle East, U.S. Treasury traders have bet that rising oil prices will worsen inflation, and a higher inflation path would make it difficult for the Federal Reserve to begin cutting rates in the short term. It is expected that the Federal Reserve may delay the timing of rate cuts, and the possibility of further rate hikes cannot be ruled out. If the Federal Reserve chooses to raise interest rates, it would support a stronger USD and, in turn, lead to depreciation of the NT$. The Company adopts a natural hedging strategy in the management of foreign exchange positions, to avoid the risk of exchange rate fluctuations for assets and liabilities resulting from the volatile exchange rate. In the future, the Company will still keep on tracking exchange rate trends, and by referring to relevant financial information, foreign exchange reports and international economic conditions, appropriate measures to avoid the risk of exchange rate fluctuations will be formulated.

3. Inflation risks:

According to statistics from the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS), the average CPI for the full year of 2025 declined to 1.66%. Looking ahead to 2026, as Taiwan-U.S. tariff negotiations become clearer, domestic market instability is expected to ease. Overall inflation is assessed to remain moderate and manageable, with the Directorate-General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics (DGBAS) forecasting a CPI increase of 1.68% for 2026.

In the future, the Company will continue to monitor international raw material trends, changes in upstream steel mill wholesale prices, and downstream industry shipments, in order to rapidly respond to cost changes, while effectively managing the production and sales portfolio and inventory status.

(II) The company's policy regarding high-risk investments, highly leveraged investments, loans to other parties, endorsements, guarantees, and derivatives transactions; the main reasons for the profits/losses generated thereby; and response measures to be taken in the future:

1. The Company focuses on its major business, and in the most recent year no high-risk investments or highly leveraged investments were made.
2. The counterparties disclosed in the consolidated financial statements for loaning of funds are those in need of short-term financing. The counterparties of loaning of funds are limited to the Company and its investees, and handled pursuant to each company's "Operation Procedures for Loaning of Funds to Others."
3. The counterparties disclosed in the consolidated financial statements for endorsement/guarantee are those in need of endorsement/guarantee due to business relationships or construction contracted, or the investees in need for business. Endorsement/guarantee is handled pursuant to each company's "Operation Procedures for Endorsement/Guarantee."
4. The Company conducts derivative transactions for avoiding the market risk resulting from exchange rate fluctuations of those net positions of assets/liabilities denominated in foreign currencies, rather than arbitrage or speculation. Such transactions are handled in accordance with the Company's "Procedures for Engagement in Derivative Product Transactions."

(III) Research and development projects to be carried out in the future and expenditures expected for research and development:

To meet the development needs of various business units, the Company has invested in technology R&D, including research and development of automated steel structure welding for the Construction Division and the introduction of technological cooperation for automated high-bay warehouse systems for the Warehousing Business Division. Other efforts include the development and research of emerging market products and related materials such as electric vehicles, electric buses, server racks, and new green environmentally friendly steel materials. In terms of process improvement and capacity enhancement, projects have been implemented including the upgrading and modification of steel coil (plate) cutting equipment, digitalization of production and big data reapplication through equipment networking, refinement and improvement of precision slitting and stamping equipment, and expansion of tower crane equipment in the Construction Division.

Key factors affecting the success of future R&D are the training and cultivation of talent and the budget input. R&D budget expected to be invested in 2026 is NT$31.30 million.

(IV) Effect on the Company's financial operations of important policies adopted and changes in the legal environment at home and abroad, and measures to be taken in response: None.

(V) Impact of technology (including cyber security risks) and industry evolution on the Company's finance and business, and measures to be taken in response:

In response to the frequent occurrence of information attack incidents in traditional industries, the Company not only continues to strengthen the security protection of the corporate information communication environment, but also regularly reviews important equipment and data to ensure its "high availability", thereby reducing the impact of information security incidents on the Company's operations.

(Please refer to Page 73 - Cybersecurity Management)

(VI) Effect on the Company's crisis management of changes in the Company's corporate image, and measures to be taken in response: None.

(VII) Expected benefits and possible risks associated with any mergers and acquisitions, and mitigation measures being or to be taken: None.

(VIII) Expected benefits and possible risks associated with any plant expansion, and mitigation measures being or to be taken:

By expanding plants, capabilities for accepting orders and processing will increase, and thus profit improves.

(IX) Risks associated with any consolidation of sales or purchasing operations, and mitigation measures being or to be taken:

Other than Toyota Tsusho (Taiwan) Co., Ltd., the Company's top ten clients occupy less than 10% of the revenue for the whole year. However, Toyota Tsusho is a consolidated purchasing client, so many stamping suppliers are engaged to diversify materials, and thus there is no risk associated with any consolidation of sales. For the purchase of goods, the Company will continue to grasp the trends in the steel industry and purchase goods in an adequate and diversified manner.

(X) Effect upon and risk to the Company in the event a major quantity of shares belonging to a director, supervisor, or shareholder holding a stake greater than 10 percent in the Company is transferred or otherwise changes hands, and mitigation measures being or to be taken:

There were no significant transfers or changes in the equity of directors, supervisors, or major shareholders with more than 10% ownership interest in 2025.

(XI) Effect upon and risk to the Company associated with any change in controlling power, and mitigation measures being or to be taken: None.

There had no change in controlling power in 2025.

(XII) List major litigious, non-litigious or administrative disputes that: (1) involve the company and/or any company director, any company supervisor, the president, any person with actual responsibility, any major shareholder holding a stake of greater than 10 percent, and/or any company or companies controlled by the Company; and (2) have been concluded by means of a final and unappealable judgment, or are still under litigation. Where such a dispute could materially affect shareholders' equity or the prices of the Company's securities, the annual report shall disclose the facts of the dispute, amount of money at stake in the dispute, the date of litigation commencement, the main parties to the dispute, and the status of the dispute as of the date of publication of the annual report: None.

(XIII) Other important risks, and mitigation measures being or to be taken: None.
